Author Sameena K. Mughal Publishes Second Book in Series of Novels Empowering Women in the Golden Age of Islam

"The Siddiqui Brothers in Cairo" addresses on-going adventures of characters from the author's debut novelette

WEST CHESTER, PA, March 1, 2016 – ‘Learn, teach, and have fun’ is the Siddiqui family motto, and brothers Omar, Jafar, and Nasir do their best to honor it throughout their rousing adventures in Sameena K. Mughal’s follow-up to “Shaherazade’s Daughters,” set during the Golden Age of Islam.

When Mongols destroy the House of Wisdom, the brothers are forced to find a new home and decide to settle in Cairo. Before they can catch their breath, however, they’re standing up for a female scientist against the ranks of chauvinistic scholars claiming to be progressive while refusing to acknowledge her skill and contributions.

Throughout their stories, you’ll meet Omar’s unexpected love, discover a murder plot, encounter a troublesome fairy, and uncover Jafar’s surprising power.

Inspired by classic Arabian Nights tales, Sameena K. Mughal’s second novel “The Siddiqui Brothers in Cairo” will encourage and entertain you as these characters win you over, page by page, with their brilliant, heartfelt charms.

Lovers of literature will enjoy this novelette, available through Amazon. Sameena K. Mughal is an author, educator and blogger living in West Chester, PA.
